

A tale of cursed lovers repeatedly reincarnated. Either they finally fulfill the prophecy, or die for all time. Ancient druid-turned-mercenary, Khyryn of Powys, has loved one woman for two thousand years, and would claim her again if only Wynne Hailey remembered him. But the curse that causes her early demise in each lifetime, ensures hell never forget her and guarantees she'll never remember him or their love. For Wynne to fulfill the foretold prophecy and break the curse, Khyryn must travel through time to the modern day faire and steal her away to the past. On a mission to clear her uncle's name, Wynne infiltrates the cast at a medieval faire to reclaim a stolen artifact. Instead, she discovers not all the characters at this faire are merely actors. One tries to kill her and another abducts her. Make-believe turns menacing when Wynne and Khyryn are forced to face destiny, desire, and the villain who wants them both dead. In this game of love and war, all is fair...and deadly.
