

Cynthia had now decided, she was going to start a new life. After yet another disastrous relationship, this time with her boss with whom she got engaged, Cynthia packed her bags and moves away from it all. In the new city she has a new job, new colleagues but encounters the same problem: Men. Although this one particular guy who lives across her new house is kind, sweet and sexy, she had had enough of men. They were the source of all her problems, right? But how is Cynthia going to keep avoiding her attractive neighbour, who seems to be genuinely interested in her. And how will she survive in a new city with no friends. Was she still content with her choice to start over?
