

1939. Dr. Klaus Renner, a world-renowned professor returns to Berlin after a twenty-year absence. He is reunited with an old colleague, Max Schmidt, employed by Humboldt University...and the Nazi Abwehr. In the course of a casual dinner conversation, he convinces Renner of the importance of eliminating Great Britain from the conflict that will surely soon engulf Europe. Soon after, following the outbreak of war, Schmidt disappears and Renner is quick to make the connection between the man's words and actions. 1940. Hitler's plans for Operation Sea Lion, the invasion of Great Britain, are almost complete. Yet the Germans still have reasons to suspect that their most vital connection in Gravesend, from where the daughter of a Bavarian countess (codenamed Daisy) is operating, is compromised. Before the plans reach their final stage, Renner, now a member of the Abwehr, will have to be inserted into the country to prove that his colleague is indeed supplying factual information back to Berlin and that he has not been turned by the enemy. It is in Gravesend, where a small group of individuals of doubtful loyalties will come face to face, the truth about each of them revealed and the fate of Great Britain and the war decided.
